This information provides a general description of the risks associated with the Financial Instruments which may be included in the Portfolio, taking account of your categorisation as a Choose an item.. This information does not disclose all of the risks and significant aspects of Financial Instruments which may be invested in by the Company on your behalf but is designed to give you an understanding of the major risks and characteristics relating to such Financial Instruments.

2. Financial Instruments

Your Portfolio may contain any of the following:

Risk Warning: Any investment in financial instruments entails substantial risks, the degree of which depends on the nature of each investment, and may not be suitable for all investors. The value of any investment may increase or decrease in value and investors may lose all their invested capital.

- (i) Transferable securities / classes of securities which are negotiable on the capital market (i.e. shares in companies and other securities equivalent to shares in companies, bonds, and other forms of securitised debt and any other negotiable securities which carry the right to acquire any such transferable securities by subscription or exchange).
- (ii) Money-market instruments

- (viii) Derivative instruments for the transfer of credit risk.

3 General Risks

All forms of investment involve some degree of risk. The value of investments may fall as well as rise. Information regarding past returns (yields) of a Financial Instrument does not guarantee the present and/or future returns. The use of historic data does not constitute a binding or safe forecast as to the corresponding future return of the Financial Instruments to which such data refer. Please note that invested capital may be at risk and that one may not receive back the original investment amount.

Certain Financial Instruments may not be capable of being liquidated immediately due to reasons such as reduced demand and the Client may not be in a position to readily sell them or receive any information on the value of such Financial Instruments or the extent of the risks relating to such Financial Instruments.

When a Financial Instrument and/or an underlying asset of a Financial Instrument is negotiated in a currency other than the currency of the country of residence of the Client or the currency of the Client's Portfolio, any changes in the exchange rates may have a negative effect on its value, price and return.

Any Financial Instrument in foreign markets may entail risks different than the ordinary risks in the market at the Client's country of residence. In certain cases, such risks may be higher. The prospect for profit or loss from transactions in foreign markets is also influenced by the fluctuations in the exchange rates.

Initials:

The principle of leverage is to increase the investment's exposure to underlying assets. One should be familiar with the nature of the underlying property related assets invested in and the operation of leverage prior to investing in a leveraged Financial Instrument. When a Financial Instrument involves leverage, losses may even be more than the initial capital invested.

Any investment in Financial Instruments may be subject to the following risks (non-exhaustive):

- Credit risk: in relation to the possibility the issuer not to be able to fulfill his obligations such as for the payment of interest, dividend etc.
- Political risk: in relation to the risk deriving from unforeseen event such as, natural disasters, industrial accident etc that may create difficulties to an issuer to fulfill his obligations.
- Liquidity Risk: in relation to the capability of an investor to liquidate his securities. Securities with higher tradability have lower liquidity risk.
- Inflation Risk: relates to the possibility of creation of high percentage of inflation from what is expected by the investor.
- Exchange Risk: relates to the risk associated with investments made in foreign currency. Changes in the currency exchange rate with the national currency or the currency of the Client's Portfolio affect the values of an investment.
- Interest Risk: the fluctuations of interest rates affect the bond and security market.
- Systemic Risk: related to the risk associated when a security price is related to the Market's index.
- Non-systemic risk: relates to the risk associated with the choice of a specific investment based on the financial results of an issuer and/or with his activities.

As part of the Company's obligations under the Law to meet the suitability requirements, we have assessed each Client's individual risk appetite. The Company will manage the Portfolio and provide the Services in line with this specified risk appetite.
